Community & Indigenous Engagement

Corporate statement on how WolfPro serves the communities and Nations it works with

////// STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLE

WolfPro Engineering & Land Surveying Inc. is rooted in the Peace Region of Northeastern British Columbia and Alberta. Our relationships with the communities and Nations we serve are as foundational to our work as the engineered designs and surveyed frameworks on which they are built.

////// COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

The Peace Region is more than our head office. It is our home. We live, work, play, and raise families in the same communities we serve, and we believe the strength of an infrastructure firm is measured as much by the relationships it keeps as by the projects it delivers. From equestrian sponsorships and community fundraisers to scholarship support and youth trades mentorship, WolfPro invests locally so that the places that built us continue to thrive.

////// INDIGENOUS ENGAGEMENT & PARTNERSHIPS

Every project we undertake sits on the traditional territories of the Treaty 8 First Nations and Métis communities of Northeastern British Columbia and Alberta. We approach that responsibility with humility and intention. Meaningful Indigenous engagement is not a compliance checkbox for our team. It is a foundation of how we plan, survey, and build.

Our commitment begins with early, transparent consultation. We make space for Nations to shape project scope before it is set, share traditional land-use knowledge that informs our surveys and designs, and review our deliverables in a spirit of partnership. We collaborate across the communities we serve, partnering with Indigenous-owned businesses, local contractors, and regional specialists on field work, environmental monitoring, and cultural review, because the best outcomes for the land come from the teams that know it best.

////// CREATING OPPORTUNITY

WolfPro is committed to creating opportunity. We actively seek out training, apprenticeship, and employment pathways for Indigenous youth entering the engineering, surveying, and trades professions, and we support programs that expand access to technical careers across the region.

Through these partnerships, we strive to leave the communities we work in stronger than we found them, with infrastructure that endures, relationships that respect the people of the land, and a legacy rooted in mutual trust.

"The best outcomes for the land come from the teams that know it best."
